Sara Eichner

Sight Lines

October 12- November 11, 2006

Sears-Peyton Gallery is pleased to present our first solo exhibition of works by Sara Eichner. Sight Lines is Eichner's second one person show in New York.

“The walls of brickwork, siding, fencing, and shingles that form the texture of Eichner's Williamsburg neighborhood are the inspiration for her “exteriors.” Eichner's decontextualized details are rendered expansive in vibrating complementary colors and arranged to create optical unease that compels the viewer to look more closely. Upon further inspection, the viewer notices the deliberately thick paint application, the delicate brushwork, and the snowflake uniqueness of every repeated shape. Stepping back again, the viewer discovers the shuddering tension of having to resolve being both too close and too far, obliquely situated and, indeed, located in an odd position that is both intimate and defamiliarizing.”
